Two gerbil adventures from Helen Piers wherein she uses her unfailing formula of superb colour photographs and a patterned, story-telling text. Here she introduces a new character, Suko, who in the first story tries, unsuccessfully at first, to find somewhere that nobody else will discover to make her nest and, as we eventually learn, to have her babies. In the second story Suko, having lost her four offspring one by one on a walk round the garden, is finally reunited with her family and gains an extra charge, though this one is somewhat different. Ideal books for apprentice readers of all ages.
