This writer capitalises children's high regard for pterodactyls and brontosaurus. Bobby has a birthday cake in the shape of a dinosaur: when he wishes it real, it biomes so. The author is served well by the gifted artist who tells the untold bits --- about the mystery of it all, and the anxious, sometimes pompous, adults. In the last double pages spread, the artist's imagination combines with the author's intention to invite a reflective reading.
