LMS means less money than ever for schools and puts these two excellent collections out of reach of all but the most privileged classrooms. I prefer the second collection - ambitious, memorable, original. The first collection is rather too predictable - 'Snedri Vashtar' again?

Both collections provide spirited responses to the breadth of literary study and analysis recommended by the Cox Report. Useful for either GCSE or A-level work. And both - because of their price - are, sadly, likely to remain on bookshop shelves.
