Anyone who dreads being in the limelight and knows the agonies of being forced there will empathise totally with Porky Phillips. Chubby, easy-going Martin Calras Porky is more sensitive than anyone realises and feels his dread of being 'genie' in the school play can't be legitimate so his instinctive polite refusals are soon overpowered and fear and loneliness mount. Luckily, the mysterious unknown 'double' eventually turns despair to anger so the real Porky Phillips can at last triumph quite magnificently - and relief, not least for the reader, is immense. Powerful, poignant and pertinent, this is a fine Puffin 'Chillier.'
