Would you believe that this is 'A novelisation by Todd Strasser. Based on a screenplay by Jonathan Hensleigh and Greg Taylor & Jim Strain. Based on a screen story by Greg Taylor & Jim Strain and Chris Van Allsburg. Based on the book by Chris Van Allsburg'? I'd dearly love to know the difference between 'and' and '&' in the Hollywood machine. Anyway, by the time this review is printed the much-hyped film will have run its course and Robin Williams will be a few squillion dollars richer. Needless to say the book is utter tosh with each chapter being merely a description of yet more amazing special effects (which they probably are ... in the cinema). Question - How does anyone even think about writing the sentence, 'Carl Bentley, a twenty-year-old man with dark skin, looked up and smiled'?
